

Curlers Organize For Approaching Season

ELECTION OF OFFICERS AND PLANS FOR NEW RINK DISCUSSED

A well attended meeting of the local curlers was held on Monday evening, Sept. 18th, in the Town Hall. The purpose of the meeting was to discuss proposed plans for a new and up-to-date curling rink and the election of officers. The meeting was given particulars of the cost of erection and details of a two-sheet rink could be enlarged to a three or four sheet rink when necessary, as it was generally felt that the membership would exceed forty in number and as the plans for financing the project would be met by membership dues. The proposition was favorably received.

The following officers were elected: President, D. L. Plimton; vice-president, Dr. H. C. Wallace; secretary-treasurer, W. J. O'Callaghan. Executives, M. L. Forster, J. Telford and J. Guthrie.

A vote of thanks was passed in favor of the retiring officers and the new officers were given full power to act.

Immediate steps are being taken in the selection of a site and as soon as this is decided upon, the building operations will commence in order that ice may be made as early in the season as possible.

Alberta's Regina Victories

While a great deal has been printed about Alberta's remarkable victories in world seed grain competition at Regina congress, the whole story has by no means been told. A complete analysis of the winnings reveals many interesting features. Alberta exhibited in 35 out of the 57 classes in the show, and won 175 out of the 839 prizes offered in these classes. The total amount of money awarded in the classes was $72,118, out of which Alberta exhibitors took $24,509, or about one-third. In addition to this, Alberta grain judging teams took a total of $1,785 in cash prizes and $300 in scholarships, so that the total value of all Alberta winnings at the show was $26,594. In the hard red spring wheat class, ten provinces, states or countries including United States, Australia and Germany, competed, and Alberta won 86.5 per cent. of the total money. In white oats, ten provinces, states or countries were represented, including United States, New Zealand and Australia, and Great Britain. Here Alberta won 78 per cent. of the money. In yellow oats, Alberta competed against three other provinces as well as the United States, Great Britain and Australia, and in this class won 885 per cent. of the money. In alfalfa, Alberta took top place in the prize list, and second only to the United States in total money. CAN TRAVEL BY ALL-CANADIAN ROUTE

Ontario Hoping to Complete Stretch Between Fort William and Kenora by Next Spring; Coast-to-Coast "Highway" Involves Boat Trip

PORT ARTHUR, Ont., Sept. 18.—Canada will likely have a coast-to-coast motor highway by this time next year if the present plans of the Ontario government work out. It will involve the use of lake steamers to bridge one gap of some 300 miles, but while the long-mooted trans-Canada highway will not be an actual fact, it will be possible for a motorist to travel from Halifax to Vancouver without leaving Canadian territory.

Some 1,300 miles, or one-third of the whole length of the trans-Canada highway lies within the province of Ontario, most of it in the north where the roads are under the jurisdiction of Hon. William Finlayson, minister of lands and forests and northern development, who is accompanying Premier George S. Henry on his tour of northwestern Ontario. It was Mr. Finlayson who indicated the development to be expected next year, in addressing a chamber of commerce here and in an interview.

On the east, Ontario now has a road from the Quebec boundary to Sault Ste. Marie, and the government has high hopes of being able to complete the stretch between Fort William and Kenora early next year. Mr. Finlayson said Assurance has been given, he stated, that if this is done, a leading steamship line will give low rates for transporting cars from Sault Ste. Marie to the head of

JAPANESE BOYS TO EXHIBIT WORK

Sending Specimens of Craftsmanship to Boys' Work Conference in Toronto

TOKYO, Sept. 18.—A cordial message of friendship, in the shapes of paintings, carvings, small toys, hagi-its (battledores and shuttlecock of the Japanese form of the game universally played in this country at New Year's), and other similar things, fashioned by boyish hands in Japan, left Yokohama September 7, destined for the world conference on boys' work opening at Toronto, September 7.

These articles, sent from the boys of Japan to Canada as a greeting to the boys of other lands, have been made under the auspices of the Teikoku Jido Kyokai-Kai (Imperial Children's Education Society) of Tokyo. They were made by boys, of various ages up to 19, scattered all over Japan, and were collected and prepared for shipment to Canada by Mr. Denichi Ishii, director of the society. Japan, through this society, is participating in the boy's work conference for the first time, the society acting in acceptance of an invitation from Toronto to take part.

The boys here are sending their handiwork as it was suggested to them by the society to do so would awaken a better understanding, with closer relations, between them and boys of other nations, and they hope maybe as a result of their labor in making these small things new friendships may spring up, with the exchange of letters.

Card of Thanks

Mr. John R. Harper and Mr. Jefferson A. Harper, of Toronto, wish to thank the many friends of their late brother George, for their kind and thoughtful expressions of sympathy and floral tributes.

Cattle To Leave West For Britain

Two Shiplads Will Be Sent From Fairies, J. Byers Says at Chaplin

CHAPLIN, Sept. 17.—Jack Byers, recently appointed general manager of the Western Stock Growers' Association, will send two ship loads of western Canadian cattle, totaling 900 head, to British markets on or about October 6.

He made this known here Friday while winding up his business preparatory to taking up residence in Calgary where the head office of the Western Stock Growers' Association is located.

Mr. Byers, who has just returned from delivering a shipment of western Canada cattle to the Old Country, is of the opinion that the only hope for an increase in the price of livestock is in shipment to the overseas market. He stated that one load of the 900 cattle shipment would be docked at Birkenhead and the other at Glasgow.

Convict Two Of Rioting; Two On Assembly Charge

RALPH PIMLOTT ACQUITTED BY JURY AS RELIEF CAMP TROUBLE ARIED IN COURT; TRIAL OF FOUR OTHERS OPENS THIS MORNING

SASKATOON.—One man was acquitted, two were convicted of unlawful assembly and two of rioting by the jury deliberating Saturday afternoon on the trial of five men charged with both rioting and unlawful assembly in the combat between single unemployed and police at the government relief camp here May 8, when Inspector Sampson, R.C.M.P., was killed.

Ralph Pimlott was acquitted.

James "Red" McLean and Tom O'Hara were convicted of the lesser crime of unlawful assembly.

Jack McLean and Steve Cameron were convicted on the more serious count of rioting.

The jury on the trial of the quintet was out one hour and 30 minutes; it delivered its verdicts at 4:45 o'clock Saturday afternoon.

WILL BE SENTENCED TODAY

The verdicts marked the disposal of a case which had attracted attention to six of 27 men charged in connection with the riot, and coming before Mr. Justice H. Y. McDonald in Court of King's Bench here. First to be tried was Richard Nolan who was convicted Thursday of rioting. Nolan, Steve Cameron, Jack McLean, and O'Hara will appear for sentence at 10 o'clock this morning. After the five men receive their sentences, it is expected the persecution will proceed against John Cameron, Mike Peskivetz, William Rivus and Richard Swain. These accused were to have appeared with Richard Nolan at the first trial last Tuesday but failed to appear when their names were called. They were arrested the same day on bench warrants and have spent the time since Tuesday in custody pending their hearing.

Explains Law

Charging the jury Saturday afternoon at the conclusion of a 14-hour hearing of evidence for and against the five men and addresses by crown and defense counsel, Mr. Justice McDonald pointed out that the crime of unlawful assembly comprised the following factors: a gathering of three or more men with a common intention whose attitude or actions caused persons in the neighborhood on reasonable grounds to fear a tumultuous breach of the peace.

If a tumultuous breach of the peace actually was to occur with these elements present, then there would be a riot, he continued. Accordingly the crime of rioting included the lesser crime of unlawful assembly and, if the jury was to find all or any of the accused guilty of rioting, it was not necessary for them to consider the other count. If however, they were unable to convict of rioting on the evidence before them, it still was open to them to find one or more guilty of unlawful assembly.

Judges Of Fact

The jurors, Mr. Justice McDonald continued, were the sole judges of fact and in that capacity they were to use their own discretion in placing what value they considered proper on the evidence of any witness. They could believe all or part, or none of the evidence of any witness. Pointing out the jury was not

HERE IS A SURPRISE: It must have been surprising to Canadians to read the other day that an English challenger for the international Challenge Cup for sailing canoes, a trophy held in the United States for nearly fifty years, had been successful in his quest and had taken the cup back to England after winning a three heat contest.

Not only that, but the English canoeist was triumphant in the contest for the national canoe sailing championship of the United States, so that the trophy is also on its way across the Atlantic.

The canoe has always been looked upon as a craft peculiar to North America, and to find an English challenger carrying off the two main titles in canoe sailing is a rather amazing development.

The Challenge Trophy which American canoe sailors have held ever since it was put up for competition has been sought by Canadians on eight occasions without any success, and two previous English challengers had no better luck.

Finally, however, the representatives of the Royal Canoe Club of London have proven their supremacy and the coveted trophy will spend at least the next year on the other side of the pond.

With the canoe such a popular craft in Canadian waters, it is rather a remarkable thing that English canoeists should have succeeded in wresting the American holders a championship cup that no Canadian canoeist has been able to win in nearly fifty years.

Glimpses of Russia

THIS IS THE FIRST of two articles on the life in Soviet Russia by an American agricultural expert who lived and worked two years among the Russian people.

At one time this same family owned a little home, two cows, a horse, and some household goods, all of which had been confiscated by the Russian government. The family was forced to live in a collective farm.

On the way to the train one baby was seen to be crying. The mother was in a state of distress, but was unable to comfort the child.

Early one morning during July, 1931, a small crowd of people gathered in the town square. They were waiting for the arrival of a train.

There were not a single person there, but we saw from three to six trains passing through the town where we lived.

At Novo Sibirsk, the principal city of Central Siberia, I have seen many of the same things. It was a pitiful sight, one that I shall never forget.

ITEMS OF INTEREST: Eleven happy boys took the eleventh annual tour of the United States under the leadership of George E. Buchanan, of Detroit. Their trip included a stop at the World's Fair in Chicago where the boys stayed in the city entrained for Lake Louise.

Traffic earnings of the Canadian railways for July show an aggregate gain of nearly a million dollars as compared with July, 1932, the best showing in many months on similar comparisons. Gross earnings of the Canadian Pacific account for $473,000 of this gain during the month.

"He got you that time," said Mrs. Montagu Norman to the governor of the Bank of England, when they landed recently at Quebec from Canadian Pacific liner, Duchess of Athol, on their way to Bar Harbor, Maine. The purpose of the visit is a mystery, not even a holiday being admitted by the distinguished visitor.

John Nelson, president of Rotary International, called recently by Empress of Britain on his way to Lausanne where the second European regional conference of the world-wide organization was held this month. He stated that Rotary had 150,000 members in 200 clubs.

"If from the conferences, speeches and exhibitions at the World's Grain Exhibition at Regina we can derive even one suggestion of importance to agriculturists, the show will be voted a success," said E. S. McRory, manager, United Grain Growers office in Calgary, in a recent address at the Palliser Hotel in that city.

Mr. "Dad" Simmerman has returned from a visit to Edmonton, where he was the guest of his son, Mr. Bud Simmerman. Mr. Bud Simmerman returned to Wainwright with his father and spent the week-end here, returning to the city Tuesday morning.

The Collar Stud

The electric bell rang again. Once more, Phyllis hastened downstairs. Once more there was a conversation at the door. Presently Phyllis rushed upstairs two at a time. There was a smile of triumph on her face. Something was concealed in her clutched hand.

"It was the grocer's boy," she announced.

"Well, I don't see any reason for giving three cheers on that account. A most repulsive boy, I have always thought. And I suppose he brought a 'beastly bill' with him."

"No, I settled that last Saturday. He'd got something much better. This is what you want, I think."

She had expected him to behave like a parched Arab who has just spotted an oasis. But not a bit of it!

"Ur?" he said. "Where did you get it from?"

"Took it out of his own collar. I gave him a sixpence for it. He did not seem to mind whether he wore a collar or not."

"He wouldn't!" said Rupert grimly. "It has long been my considered opinion that that boy never washes. Do you think I'm going to wear anything he's worn?"

This was too much for overwrought Phyllis. She broke down and began to sob.

Instantly his demeanor changed. There was an arm around her heaving shoulders and she was gently drawn to him.

"There, there! I'm sorry if I hurt you, sweetheart. I didn't mean it. I don't understand you, that's all," she answered faintly.

"Oh yes, you do. You understand all about me that's worth understanding. What you mean is that you don't understand the mood of a man who's lost his collar stud at a critical time."

"You do love me, don't you?"

"Do you think I married you because I disliked you?"

She began to laugh through her tears.

"It would have been a fair way of paying me out, wouldn't it?" she chuckled.

Kisses were exchanged and for a brief period harmony was restored. Phyllis became suddenly radiant.

"I know!" she exclaimed. "I've got some boiling water downstairs. I'll wash the stud for you."

"That," he said, patting her shoulders, "is an idea. Thanks so much, old girl. Make sure the water's quite boiling. Then you can pick it out with the sugar tongs."

Once more Phyllis darted away, her footfalls rattling on the hollow stairs of the old cottage. Rupert, feeling rather a brute, sat on the edge of the bed and soothed himself with a cigarette. Well, he declared to himself, it wasn't his fault, it was just his nature. He felt himself capable of facing battle, murder and sudden death without moving an eyelid. But the petty irritations of life—no, they got him down! Next time he was in the nearest town he would buy a hundred studs. These would be sufficient to last two years, even for a man who was a little careless with his studs.

After a minute or two Phyllis came bounding up the stairs again. It would have been difficult for her to estimate how many times she had been up and down those stairs that morning.

"Here you are," she called out smilingly, "beautifully clean."

"Thanks so much, old sweetheart," said Rupert.

He took it, and began to pinch the end which generally folds over in order to facilitate the putting on of the collar. Perhaps it was that the boiling water had not agreed with the constitution of the stud.

However, that may be, the stud came apart in two pieces between his fingers, the pin having come right out of the base, leaving a jagged hole.

The damage was beyond repair.

Rupert threw the two pieces of stud into the great with the impetuous gesture of a cricketer who sees a chance of getting one of his opponents run out. Then he collapsed on to the bed, tore his red hair and muttered.

Phyllis regarded him sternly. "Rupert!" she exclaimed.

"Yes," he grunted, "I'm here. All present and correct."

"Present, obviously, but I think not correct. I didn't hear what you said, but I can guess."

"Well, then, you ought never to have heard such language. And you a clergyman's daughter! I thought you'd been carefully brought up. And now do you mind leaving me alone with my misery. It's a good job my razor's a safety."

"Rupert!"

"Yes, that's my name, but don't rub it in. I owe it to my godfather who forgot to leave me any money. I hope he's by this time on his hands and knees chasing red-hot collar studs all over—"

And here, most surprisingly, Phyllis took command.

"Rupert!" she exclaimed sternly. "I'm sick of all this!"

"Are you? I'm enjoying it. But it's a matter of taste."

"Behaving like a great baby!"

"Babies didn't wear studs when I was young, but fashions are always changing!"

"Thanks! That's quite enough sarcasm. Now you're going down to have your breakfast while I find your stud for you."

A red head wagged a negative reply.

"Yes, you are! You've made me cry once already this morning."

Instantly Roger's demeanor changed and he sprang up.

"Darling!" he exclaimed.

"It's all very well to say darling, but I'm going to start crying again unless you do as your told. I'm going to start now. You'll find your bacon in the oven. Go on, or else—"

And strangely enough Rupert went, with the chastened air of an unwilling dog ordered from the room. The fact that he was hungry and secretly wanted his breakfast may have had something to do with this. While he ate he heard Phyllis bumping about on the floor, just as she had heard him some while since.

He had just reached the marmalade stage when Phyllis hailed him from the top of the stairs. The following dialogue passed down those stairs:

"Rupert!"
"Yes? 'Uilo! You haven't found it!"

"No. But I know where it is."

"So do I. It's somewhere in the bedroom. What's the use of knowing where it is unless you can lay hands on it? I can't go out meeting people without a collar—I mean go without a collar meeting people—and telling them that I know where my stud is and can't find it. I should be certified within a week."

"Don't be silly, dear. It's gone down a hole."

"What hole?"

"A mouse's hole."

"Oh, for goodness sake be grammatical and call it a mouse's hole. Otherwise I shall start crying."

"Well, a mouse's hole then."

"But we haven't any mice—only a canary. Both would be equally interesting to the cat, and—"

"There were mice here once. Perhaps when that funny old lady lived here. Anyhow, there's a small hole in the corner of the room close by the dressing table. Your stud must have fallen into it. Come up and see."

"All right, dear. Soon as I've done with the marmalade."

Rupert went up two minutes later and inspected the orifice.

"Yes," he said. "Undoubtedly a hole perforated at some time by the mus cheddarus or common cheese-mouse. Why I didn't notice it I don't know, except that I suppose I must have been blinded with dust while groping."

"Nonsense!" exclaimed Phyllis. "Mrs. Sprinks gives the room a thorough clean-out once a week."

"Yes, I know she does, and makes it dustier than ever. When I come up to bed after her visitations I start sneezing and think that somebody's been throwing pepper about. However let us not wrangle, child of my dreams, light of my life, hope of my world to be. I believe you have scored a bull's-eye. Since my stud is not in the room it is obviously under the room. I'll go and get a chisel."

Consternation wrote a plain signature on Phyllis's brow.

"You're not going to rip up those lovely stained boards to find a penny stud," she exclaimed.

"Certainly I am. I have the picture to consider. Besides—" he looked closer—"they have been ripped up before. Anyhow, I can plunk 'em down again."

While she was still protesting he bounced down the stairs, and within half a minute he had bounced up again and was kneeling, chisel in hand. Wood ripped and splintered and he prized up two boards at once and gazed into a shallow untidy depth of lath and plaster.

"Here she is!" he cried triumphantly, and plunged in his hand. "Ah, and there's an old tin box in here as well."

"What's inside it?"

"How should I know? Can I see through tin? Here, catch hold. You have a look."

And he began feverishly to insert the hitherto missing stud, and made a dive for his collar drawer. He was fitting on a collar when Phyllis uttered a scream.

"I wish you wouldn't do that, dear," he said, quite mildly for him. "My nerves are a bit on edge this morning."

"But, darling, it's the will!"

"The will? What will?"

"Miss Loughlade's, the funny old woman who used to live here."

"Well, that's nothing to be excited about. Since she didn't know us I don't suppose she can have left us anything."

"Don't you remember, when we party at the Vicarage, and Miss Fraser told me about the will. And I told you when I came back, only you didn't seem to be listening."

"I remember your trying to tell me something about a will while I was trying to read the life of Rembrandt. Well, go on."

She stared at him, bewildered; but then he was always bewildering her.

"You don't remember me telling you about the reward of 250 pounds for whoever found it?"

"No, I can't say I do. I was interested in Rembrandt."

She began to laugh in spite of herself. Was he quite human?

"Darling old idiot!" exclaimed Phyllis, who could hardly keep still, "must I tell you again? The old lady was known to make a will in favour of one of her nephews. The two witnesses came forward and attested to it, but the will couldn't be found. The nephew offered a reward of 250 pounds to anybody who found the will."

Rupert smiled.

"Congratulations, old darling. This is a bit of luck," he said.

"A bit of luck! It will get us out of debt and keep us going for months. Oh, leave off fidgeting with that tie and do get excited."

"What I want to know," said Rupert, imperturbable now that he had found his collar stud, "is why the old dear wanted to stick her will under the floor where nobody would be likely to find it. Why on earth didn't she hand it over to her solicitors?"

"Old ladies of eighty-eight are apt to be suspicious. Perhaps she didn't trust lawyers."

Rupert considered this explanation and thought it feasible.

"Well, you haven't got to live to be eighty-eight for that," he conceded.

He went to her, smiling, and kissed her.

"So glad we've had a bit of luck, old girl. Thanks to you."

She hugged him, half hysterical, and wanted to dance with him. Very urgently he disengaged himself.

"Well, look here, old girl. I must go and get on with my job. See you at lunch time. I'll shove those boards back this evening."

A few minutes later Phyllis was dancing about the kitchen. But in the midst of her joy she was trying to solve a puzzle. What sort of a man was her husband who could rave the house down for the loss of a penny stud, and in the same hour show no sign of excitement over a windfall which was nothing short of a god-send? No, she'd always love him but there were parts of his nature which she could never understand.

Meanwhile Rupert, serene but apparently unrelated, was striding on his way to continue his painting of the old water mill.

St. Thomas Anglican Church Notes

A meeting of St. Thomas W.A. was held at the home of the President, Mrs. C. T. Lally on Wednesday, Sept. 6th. In spite of the heavy rain, eleven members were present and quite a lot of business was transacted. Correspondence was read from the Vestry, the Vicar, Mr. C. Lilly, the Diocesan Thank-offering secretary, the Diocesan Dorcas Secretary, and the minutes of the last quarterly board meeting, was read. The Harvest Festival supper was discussed and the date will be announced later. Mrs. A. Adams reported for the sewing committee and the date for the Fall Bazaar was set for Nov. 25th. Mrs. Earl Boyd reported for the home cooking sales, and Mrs. Boyd received a very hearty vote of thanks for the work which she had done during the past month. Mrs. A. Adams reporting for the visiting committee told of several hospital visits being made by the committee and of fruit and flowers being taken to the sick. Mrs. Hart gave the financial report which showed the balance to be on the right side of the books. A motion was made that the W.A. pay the third quarterly apportionment which is now due to the Synod Assessments.

Anglican Harvest Festival services are as follows:
 Oct. 1—Wainwright. Holy Communion at 8 a.m., choral communion at 11 a.m. and Evensong at 7:30.
 Oct. 8—Battle Heights at 11:30 and Irma at 3 p.m.

Hi-School Hi-Lights

Douglas Hardy holds the Wainwright championship for attendance. He has attended school for six years without being absent once and has been late only once, and that time was in Grade I.

Mr. Thoreson was dictating notes "on He said: said said c'd it c'n A to a class. He said, "on all sides" then "comma" meaning "punctuation mark. Later when he looked at the notes he saw, "on all sides come." Which, no doubt, aptly explains the situation.

Norman Taylor and John Moore have invented a new ultra-violet ray machine. This should really be called an ultra-violet machine for when Bob Winsor wanted to feel what the rays were like they caused him to jump about three feet in the air and land in a pile of oil, with dire results to the oil and his clothes. Maybe they should take their machine to Vermilion Field Meet and help our "jumpers" over the pole.

Every evening at 5:00 p.m. the W.H.S. athletes (take your bow, boys and girls) muster around the school to practice for the Vermilion Track Meet, to be held Friday, Sept. 29, 1933. And really, we have some good material this year. Our "junior jumping" find, Douglas Shearer, is surprising us all as is Allen Bradley, another contender in this class. Frank Baker is quite good at the hop-step and "jump" and Russell Genderton has proven that he also can jump. Johnny Mitchell puts a means shot, about 31 feet. Joe Collett and Cliff Bradley hold our running hopes on the masculine side of the list. Many other students also practice for various events.

The girls have also taken an interest this year. Margaret Steele and her sister, Edith, heave a basket ball many goodly paces; Vivian Wittmann, Janet Forster, Lois McKay and the Steele Sisters prove their metal when it comes to high jumping. Jean Dunsmore and Eileen Forster are our broad jumpers.

In the runners class we have: Jean Dunsmore, the Steele Sisters, Georgina Wiley and our speed demon, Eileen Forster under trainer Joseph Collett—no less! All of these athletes are being trained by Messrs. King and Thoreson. We wish them the best of luck in their venture.

"Students who are used to working out jig-saw puzzles should be able to figure out the time-table," said one of our beautiful (?) co-eds, as she listlessly munched an ancient cud of (courtesy of Wm Wrigley, of Toronto), and dreamed of happier days gone by.

Some of the older students are complaining of the manner of the new Grade IX. Freshies, which seems to shout, "Call me big shot", etc. They forget the feeling they had when they climbed the "Golden Stairs" to High School for the first time. Never fear, a few weeks of homework and Detention Classes is a sure cure.

"Life's Darkest Moment"
 When Eleanor C. was trying to tell Mr. Thoreson what she wanted for an Art class.

The yearly check-up of persons violating the traffic laws of the school has started. Speeding in halls and staircases is a major crime, while using their escape as a short cut—well it just isn't done. Remember, 98 to the 9th.

We learn that a few of the "old fogies" such as Doug Wallace, Wallace Prosser and Russell Corfield, are returning this year. They will find that "the old order changeth yielding place to new."
